3. Restaurant

Particularly beneficial if you're on a multiplayer server, and are aiming to do some RP; building an establishment and cooking meals for your friends in exchange for materials or valuables is both easy and incredibly immersive.

You will need to create an area for seating and a place for people to place their orders. You can then install a serious cooking equipment behind the scenes to handle multiple meal preparations at the same time. You can use a campfire to grill your food and you can also create an ice-room for storing your meat before cooking.

4. Banqueting Hall

For those of us who want to go extremely simplistic and old-fashioned, styling your kitchen as an elegant banquet is a logical choice. A long table should be set with plenty of food, floral pots, and a fireplace for roasting the harvests from your hunting and explorations.

By default, Minecraft is a very rustic, medieval look initially, paired with the fact that the design only requires early-game materials to create and is an enticing prospect for an impressive game that doesn't take up all your playing time.

5. Cantina

A must-have for sci-fi fans, why not construct an area that can accommodate all sorts of aliens. Sci-fi allows you to use any material and create a room. You can also use cooking appliances by using a furnace/blast furnace as service droids.

You can also incorporate other design ideas into your project, like an aquarium-like mini tank that you can use to store exotic fish to gawk at (or take a bite of). You can also buy sci-fi-themed textures and skins online or on the Minecraft Marketplace If you wish to take it a step further.

6. Boat Buffet

Kitchens in the indoor space can be stale and packed. Why not move your cooking outside? Perhaps even shift it to the water and have a tropical-themed buffet. To make your cookout more fun, get some boats and fishing rods. You can also add a Jukebox or lanterns. There are many ways to customize this waterfront concept, and you'll get stunning views.

7. Hell's Kitchen

If you're looking for a dark and moody kitchen that is in another dimension, channel your inner Gordon Ramsay and build your kitchen in the most gruesome spot in Minecraft: The Nether.

It should be situated near the edge of a lake. Furnaces can be used for lighting Netherrack or glowing Campfires. You can set up a Hoglin farm in the vicinity to gather piles of Porkchop while you're playing. Use some Obsidian to reinforce the walls from Ghast's fireballs (or your own cooking disasters), and build tables, but don't expect too many regular customers.

Summary
