The brain is often considered the most important organ in the human body. Without the brain, thinking, walking, and storing memories would not be possible.

For some, the brain continues to function without problems, even at an older age. Others, however, are not so lucky.

What is The Parkinson's Protocol?

The Parkinson's Protocol is not a drug that can be provided by a doctor. It is also not a supplement bought online or at a local drug store.

Instead, the Parkinson's Protocol is a completely digital program that shares a series of researched strategies.

The idea behind The Parkinson's Protocol is to target the underlying factors associated with the illness.

A study describes Parkinson's disease as an extra pyramidal motor disorder that progresses over time.

The disease leads to the degeneration of selective dopaminergic neurons.

The same study explains that using strategies to enhance dopamine products might help with motor symptoms experienced by the patient.

The Parkinson's Protocol takes a similar approach but without advising you to use medication.

Instead, a more holistic approach is taken to help elevate dopamine levels. The system works in multiple steps.

By following each step according to the instructions, the author claims that you may experience better motor functions and a reduction in certain symptoms.
