

BEST REASONS TO STUDY TOURISM AND HOSPITALITY
MANAGEMENT IN UNIVERSITY

Those who want to be involved in a fast-changing, active, and highly aggressive profession would want to consider having a career in the ever-growing tourism industry, especially if they already possess the innate love for travelling.

Since the tourism landscape is constantly developing, it would be ideal to take up tourism and hospitality management courses in college to prepare you for the highly-competitive world while equipped with a diploma in tourism.

But aside from the perks of travelling while working, there are other reasons why being in the tourism world would be the best job for you.

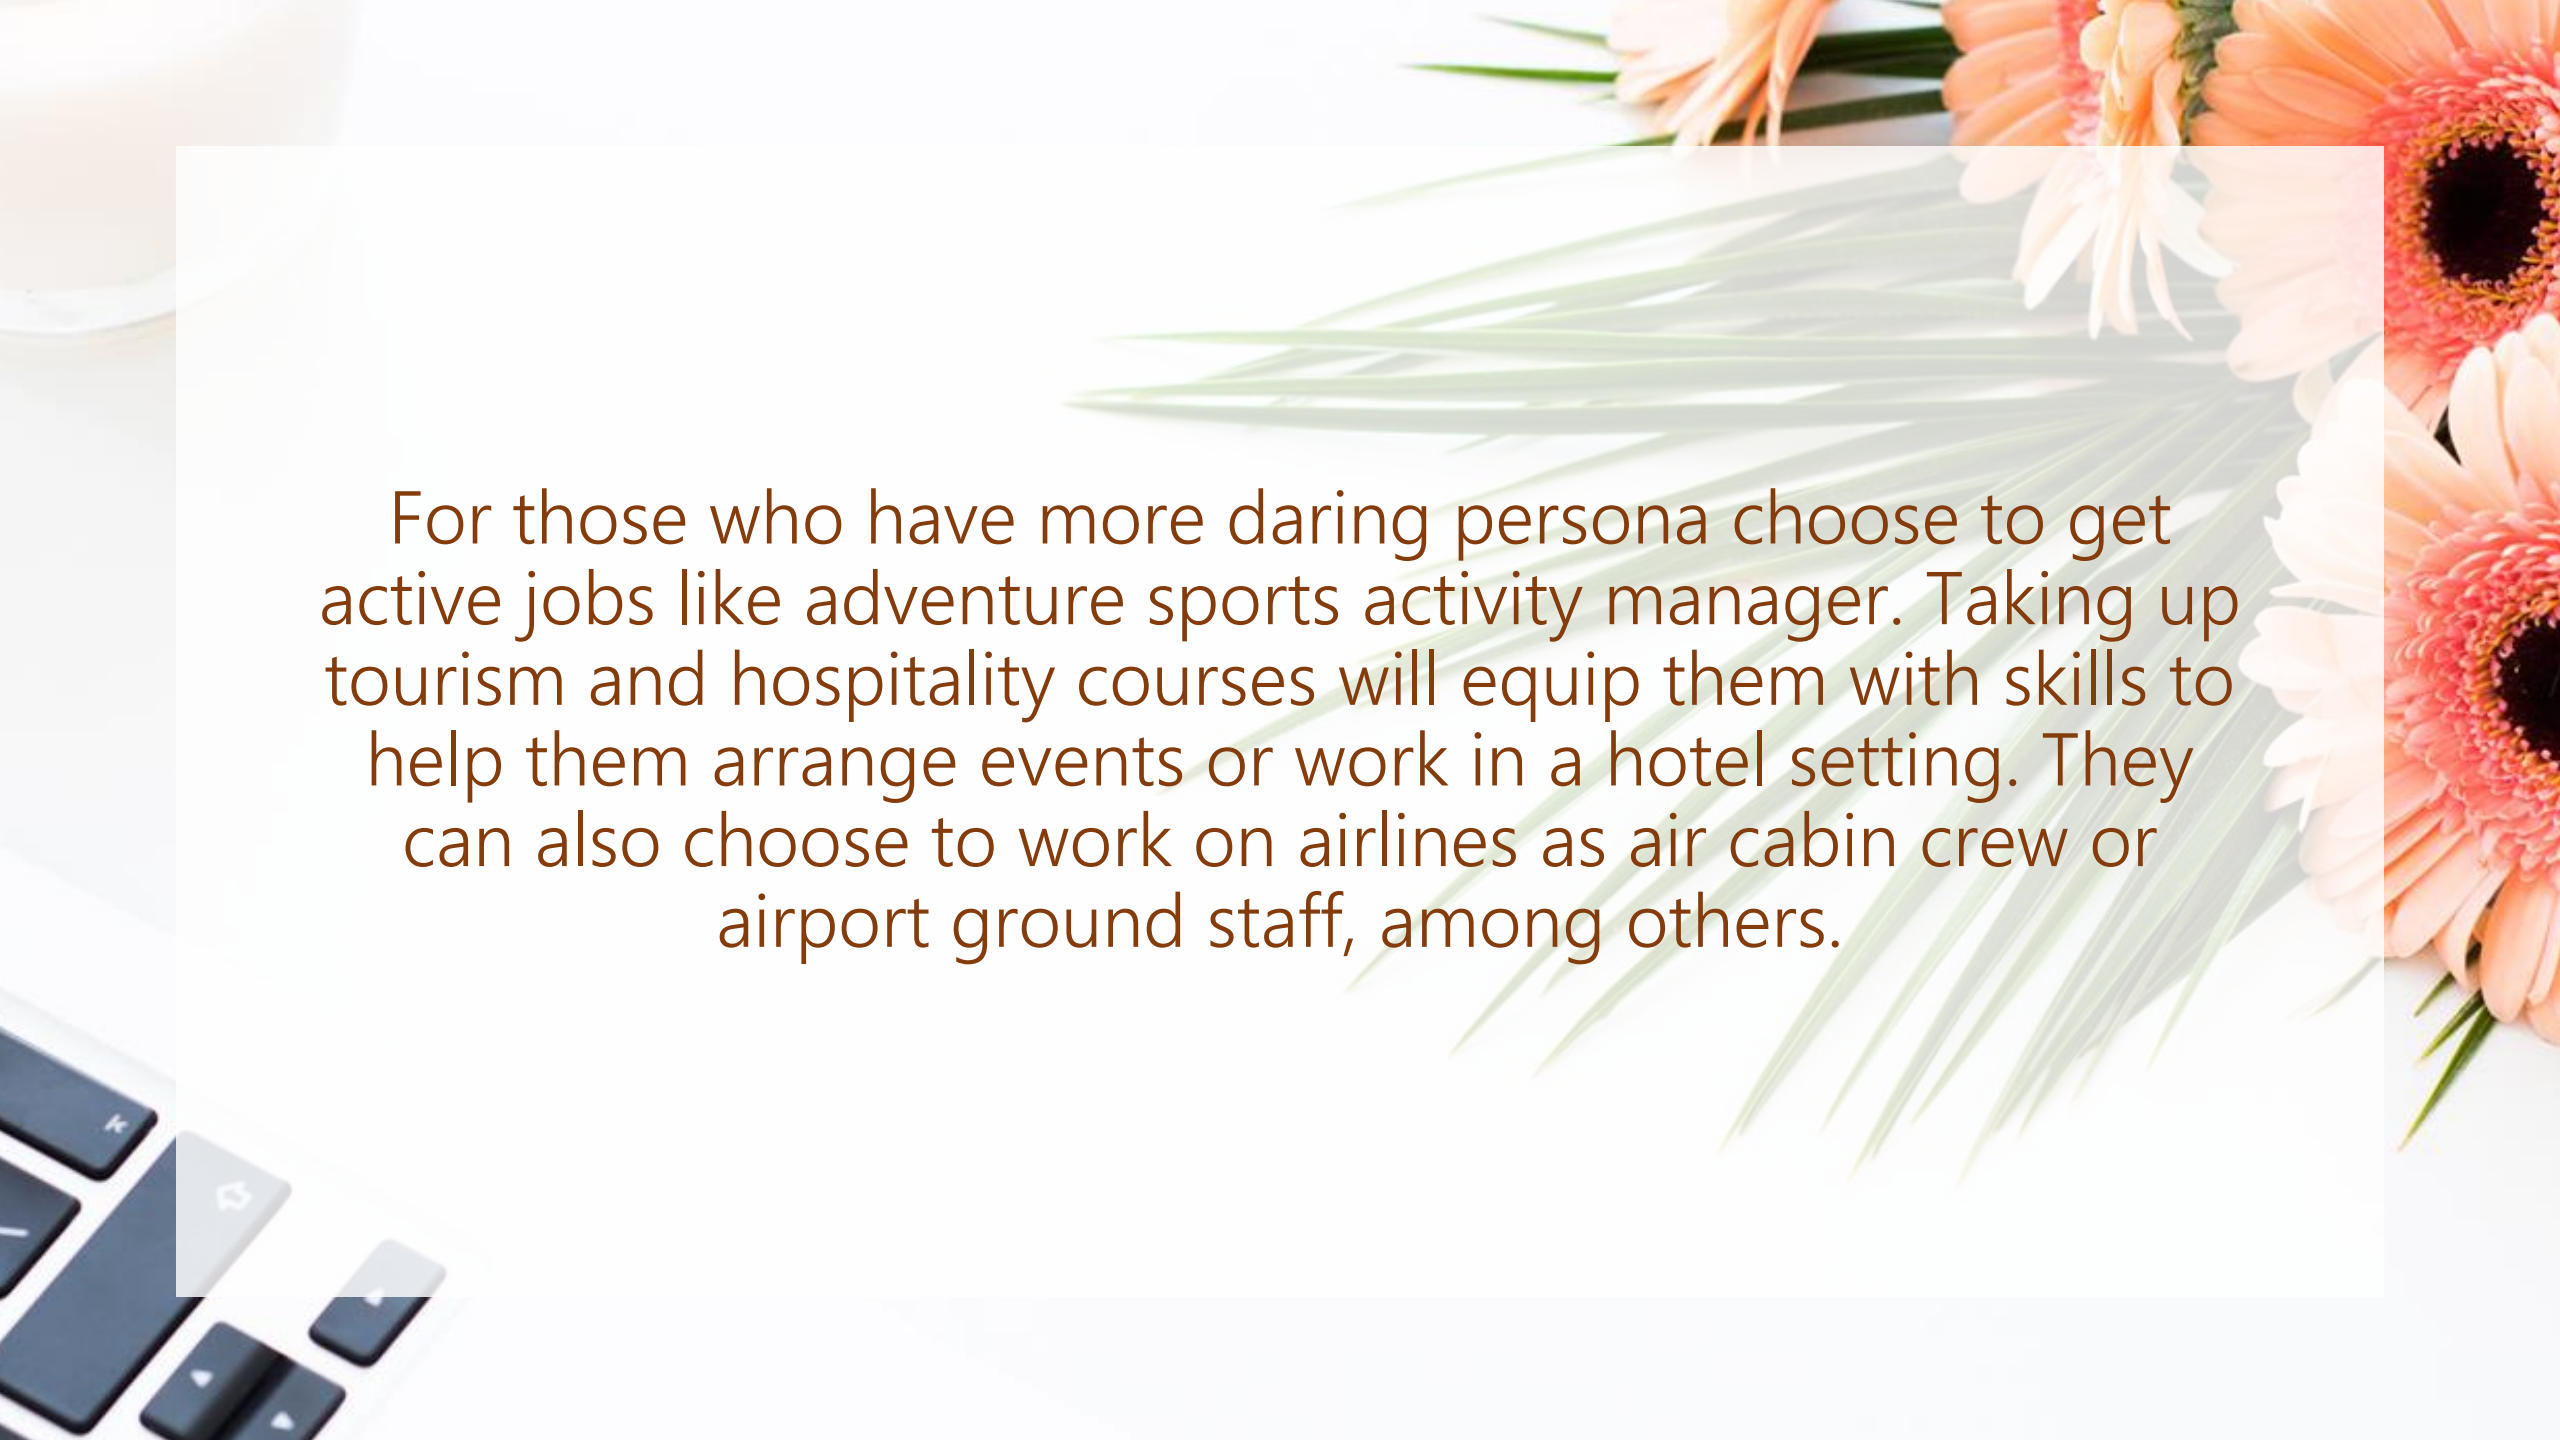

First, those who will enroll in tourism and hospitality management courses could find themselves facing unlimited opportunities worldwide, since all countries around the world currently have booming tourism industry.

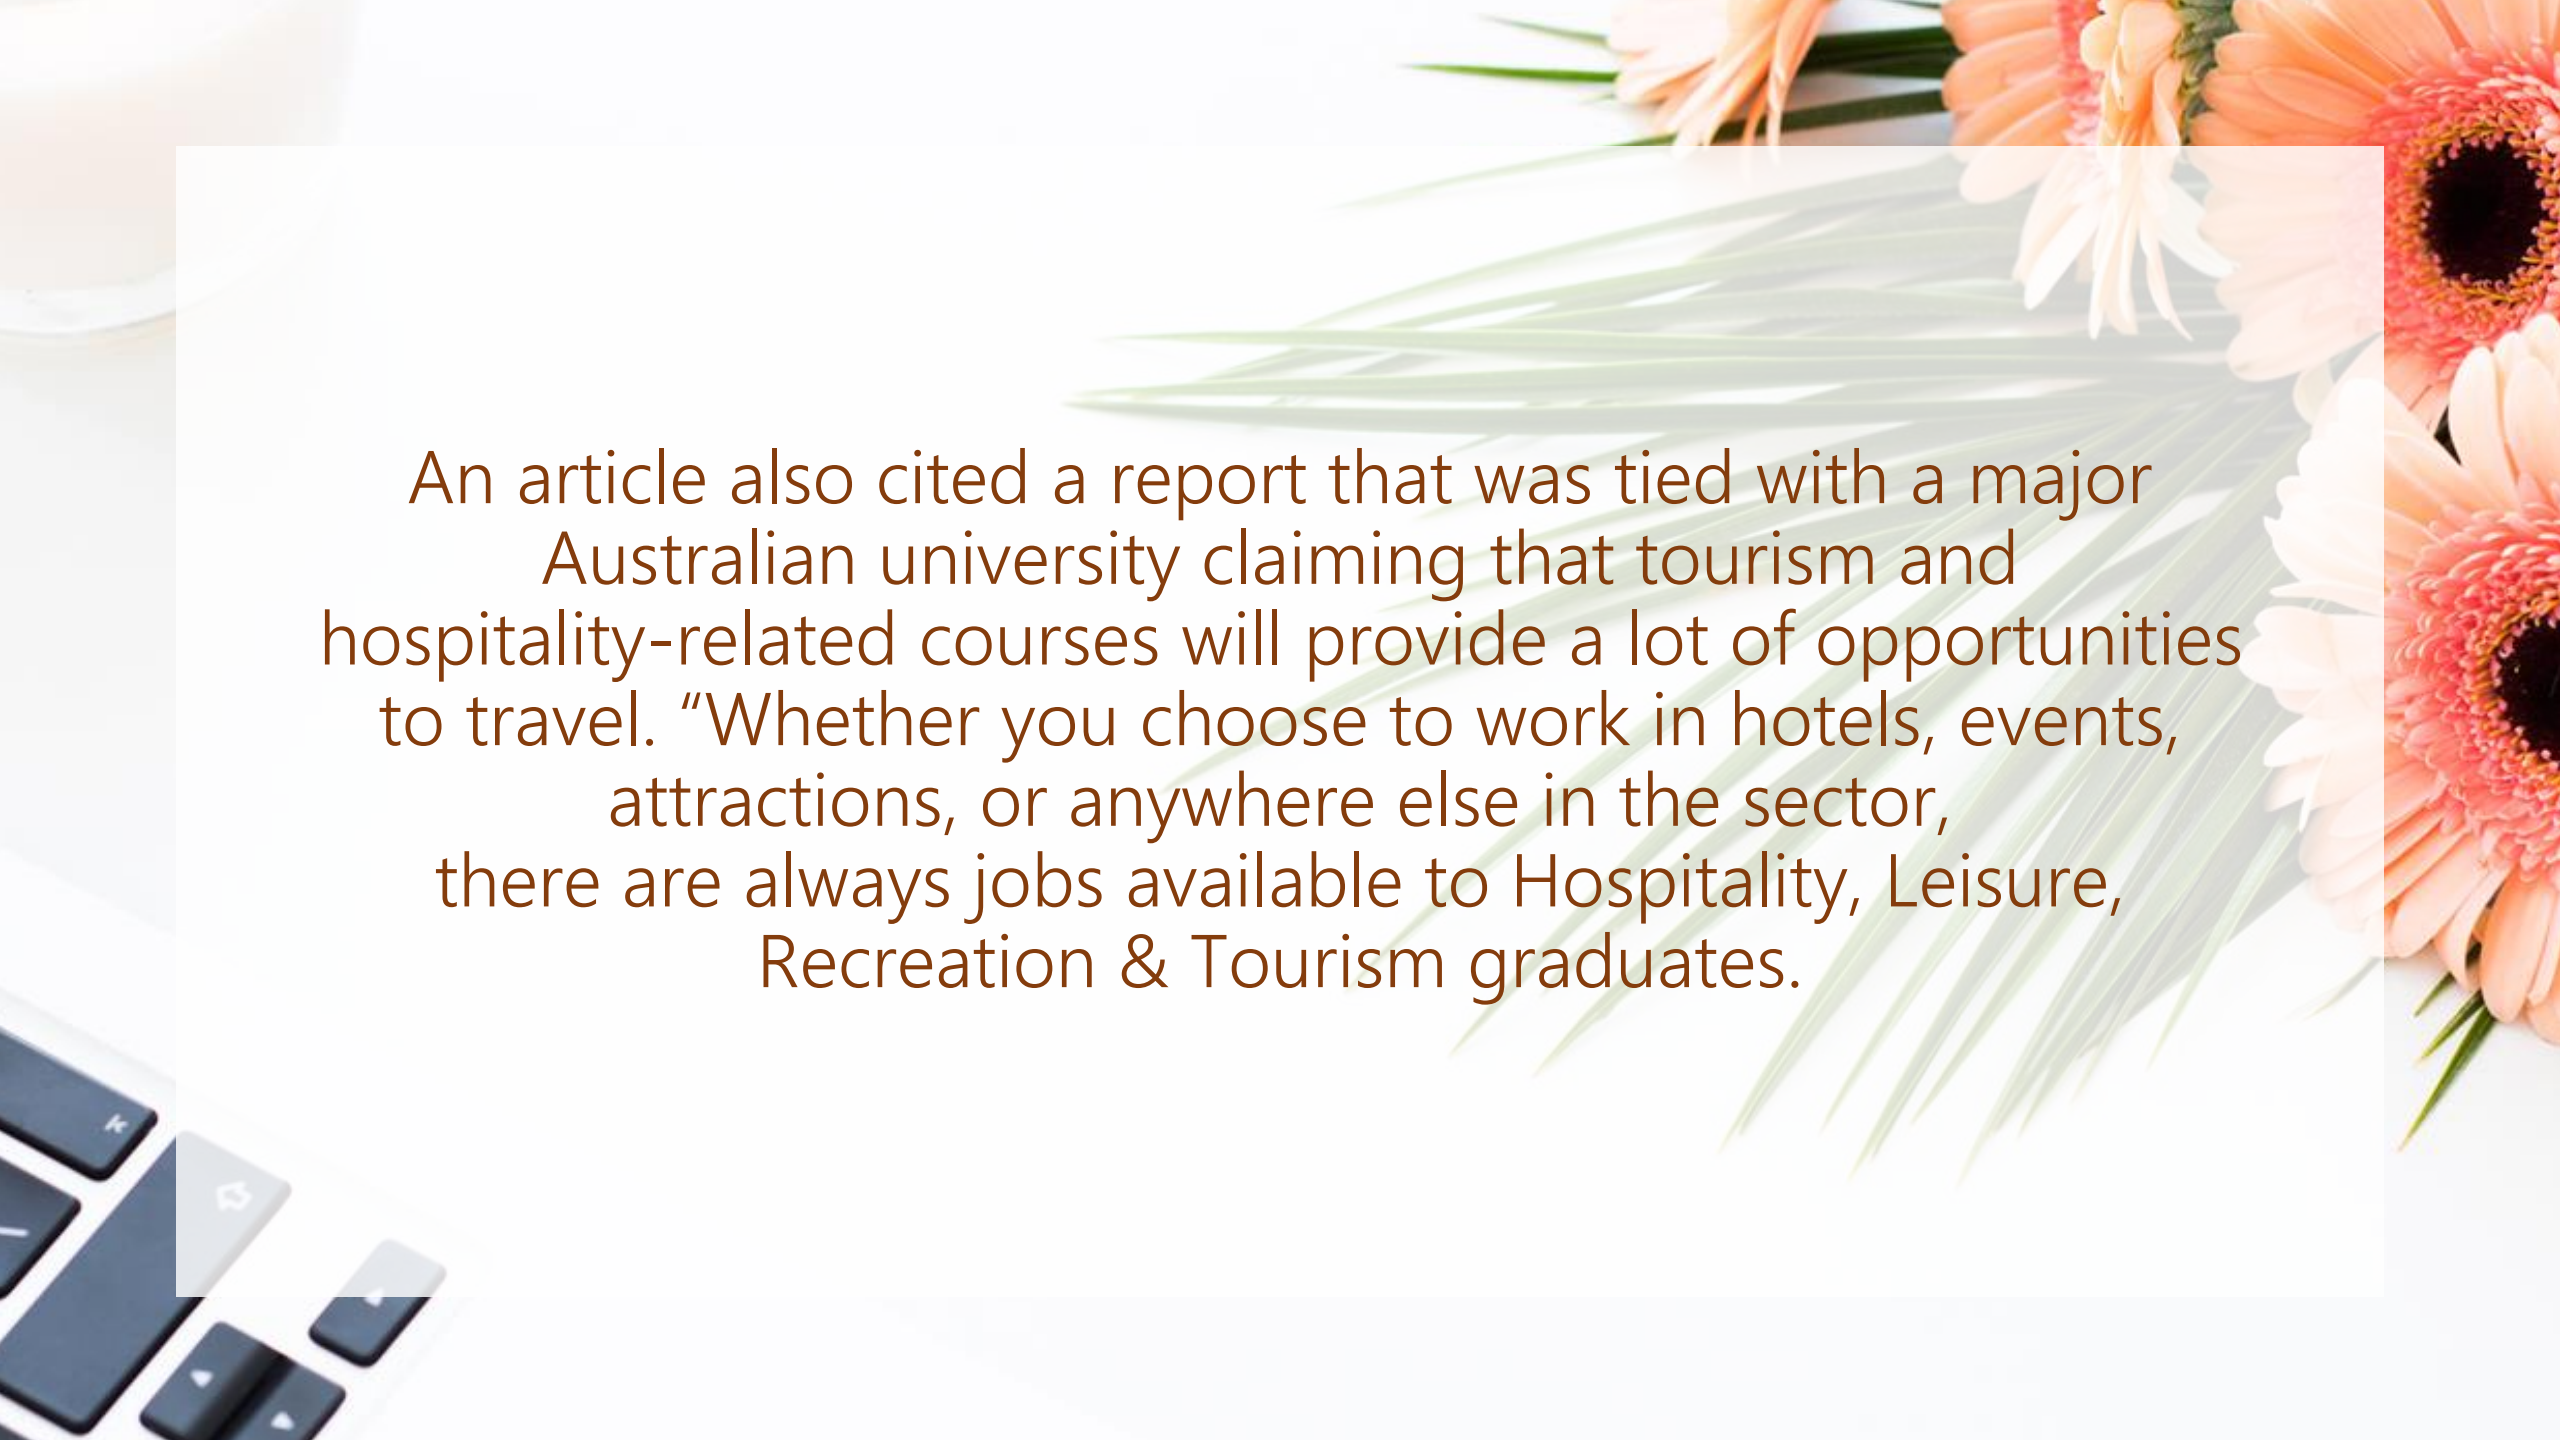

Those who will join this fun and dynamic career can also find themselves getting in touch with their creative side by conceptualizing different ways to make sure that their clients are enjoying their tour and share their experiences with others.

Being in the tourism industry will also ensure each professional that they can choose from a wide range of jobs within the profession. Those who have the gift of speaking could opt to become a tour guide, while those who enjoy arranging itineraries for individuals or groups can choose to become a tour manager or a travel consultant.

For those who have more daring persona choose to get active jobs like adventure sports activity manager. Taking up tourism and hospitality courses will equip them with skills to help them arrange events or work in a hotel setting. They can also choose to work on airlines as air cabin crew or airport ground staff, among others.

An article also cited a report that was tied with a major Australian university claiming that tourism and hospitality-related courses will provide a lot of opportunities to travel. “Whether you choose to work in hotels, events, attractions, or anywhere else in the sector, there are always jobs available to Hospitality, Leisure, Recreation & Tourism graduates.

However, it's not just graduates that get the chance to travel. Many university courses offer a year studying or working abroad, providing even more opportunities for you to see the world," the report stated.

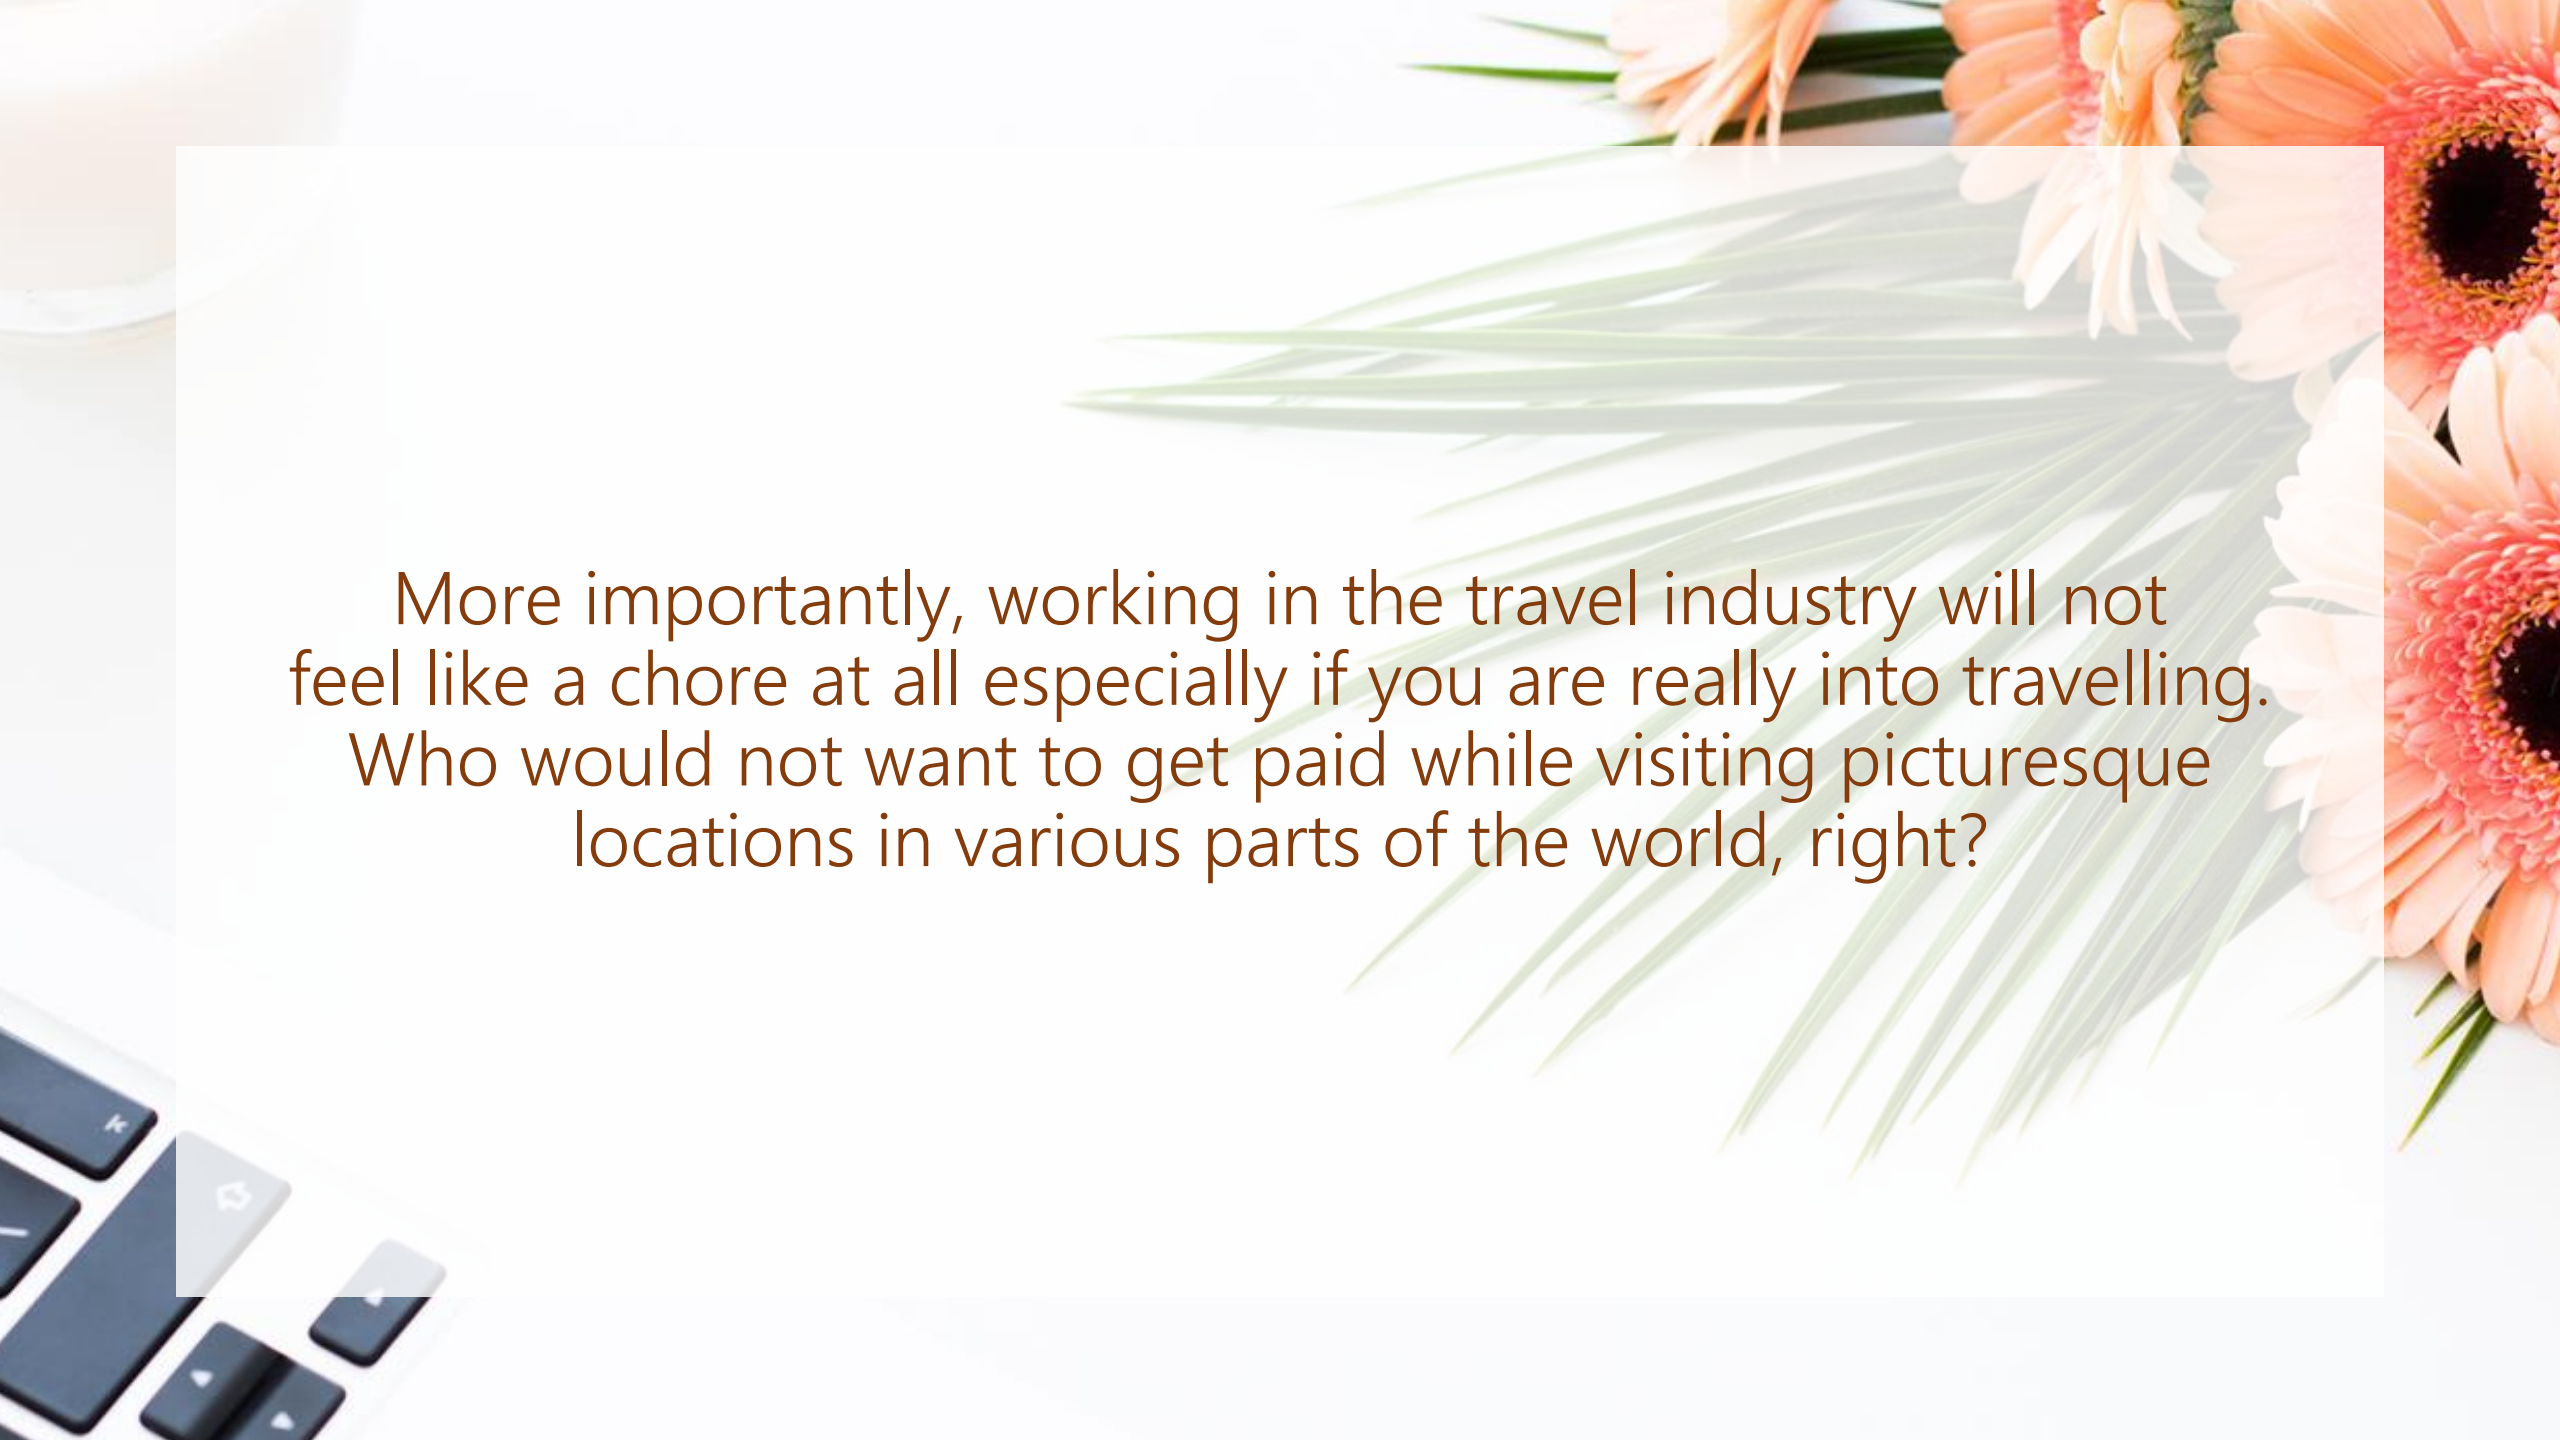

Taking up tourism and hospitality courses will also allow those enrolled to use their skills in other professions if they want to. "This knowledge can be used in careers far beyond those related to the degree, especially given the degree's focus on service.

Service is increasingly important in global markets, so graduates from a highly service-oriented degree are all set to have an immediate advantage over the competition," the report also said.

Also, working in the tourism industry will open opportunities to meet various people from different cultures and background. It could be a venue for further learning as exchanges with different acquaintances could expand their knowledge about their industry, among others.

More importantly, working in the travel industry will not feel like a chore at all especially if you are really into travelling. Who would not want to get paid while visiting picturesque locations in various parts of the world, right?

Currently, Singaporeans have a lot of options for good universities that offer excellent tourism and hospitality programs in different universities. This means that they do not have to leave the country to get a diploma in tourism Singapore if they believe that the travel industry is the best for them.