

'Minecraft Earth' Launches in Early Access This October

Minecraft Earth won't be stuck in beta testing for much longer. Mojang and Microsoft have revealed that the game's augmented reality will be available in "early access" for some countries starting in October. HANMA While it wasn't clear the platforms or countries to be included in the beta, it did include both iOS and Android users.

Earth is a slight departure in the core Minecraft experience. You can still create your own worlds in AR However, you can also participate in sharing Adventures that require you to face creatures and other obstacles to earn precious resources. It's essentially an extension of Minecraft that invites you to go into the real world and socialize, with world-building as the glue.

Time to get your phones fully charged and ready! Minecraft Earth is almost here with early access being made available to select countries all around the globe, starting this October! Visit <https://t.co/rbITL72DVG> to learn more! #MINECON pic.twitter.com/EyqitOqn73

- Minecraft Earth (@minecraftearth) September 28, 2019