ORTHOPEDIC SURGERY PERSONAL STATEMENT SAMPLE

When my great-aunt got her hip replaced, it was a very difficult process for all of us. She had never been to the hospital in her life, and she was full of trepidation for the procedure ahead. In order to calm her down, I did research into the procedure and the preparation, along with the statistics for its success. In presenting this information to her, not only did it help to calm her down, but it also piqued my interest in the field of medicine and surgery. Since that moment, I have been working towards applying for this orthopedic surgery residency program in order to become an orthopedic surgeon that can perform medical interventions to enable people to be active without pain.

Throughout my time in medical school, I have striven to enhance my knowledge of surgery and the different components of the pelvis and legs that I will be working on in the future. During my surgery rotations, I observe multiple hip replacements in addition to other surgeries and have had significant experience opening and closing wounds, as well as stitching together ligaments. I believe that my experiences in medical school will enhance my studies in my residency program.

Through this orthopedic surgery residency program, I hope to receive specialized training in operating on different large bones of the body. As these are very sensitive processes that require both dexterity and endurance, I believe that the focused clinic time during residency will prepare me for future operations. Additionally, I will gain experience in coordinating with a medical team in the operating room and learning how to support the mission of the healthcare professionals in the room in providing the best outcomes to the patient. I believe that through the skills and knowledge that I will acquire over the course of this orthopedic surgery residency program, I will be able to advance as a surgeon and provide the best possible operative care to my future patients.

OSTEOPATHIC PERSONAL STATEMENT EXAMPLE

Since I was younger, my family always emphasized the importance of whole-body health in avoiding future complications. As I grew older, I started reading more about scientific studies into the effects of healthy living and activity on different types of health problems and became interested in the effect of this type of holistic medicine in the clinic. My interest is what led me to pursue a career in medicine, and I hope to be able to gain acceptance to this Osteopathic residency program where I can hone my skills in manipulating different joints and muscles in order to promote overall health and wellbeing.

Through my medical school training, I have seen how deficiencies in different joints in the body can lead to various medical conditions. In Rheumatology, I saw how different types of arthritis could affect the mobility of an individual, and how physical therapy focused on strengthening various muscle groups in order to shift the work onto different parts of the body in order to reduce pain. In the future, I hope to continue this type of work, helping people to manage their chronic and acute conditions through a focus on overall health.

This residency program in Osteopathic medicine will enhance not only my understanding of medical principles in general but also give me unparalleled clinic time in which to advance my medical skills. I look forward to learning from skilled osteopathic physicians, who will lead me through example and will also be a source of invaluable advice for progressing in medicine as well as my career. Through continued work with patients and families, I will be able to build strong patient-doctor relationships that will enhance my ability to perform examinations and give diagnoses. Through the skills that I gain from this residency program, I will be able to pursue my career goal of becoming an Osteopathic physician, utilizing the principles of whole-body health to provide excellent medical care to my future patients.

ORTHOPEDIC TRAUMA PERSONAL STATEMENT SAMPLE

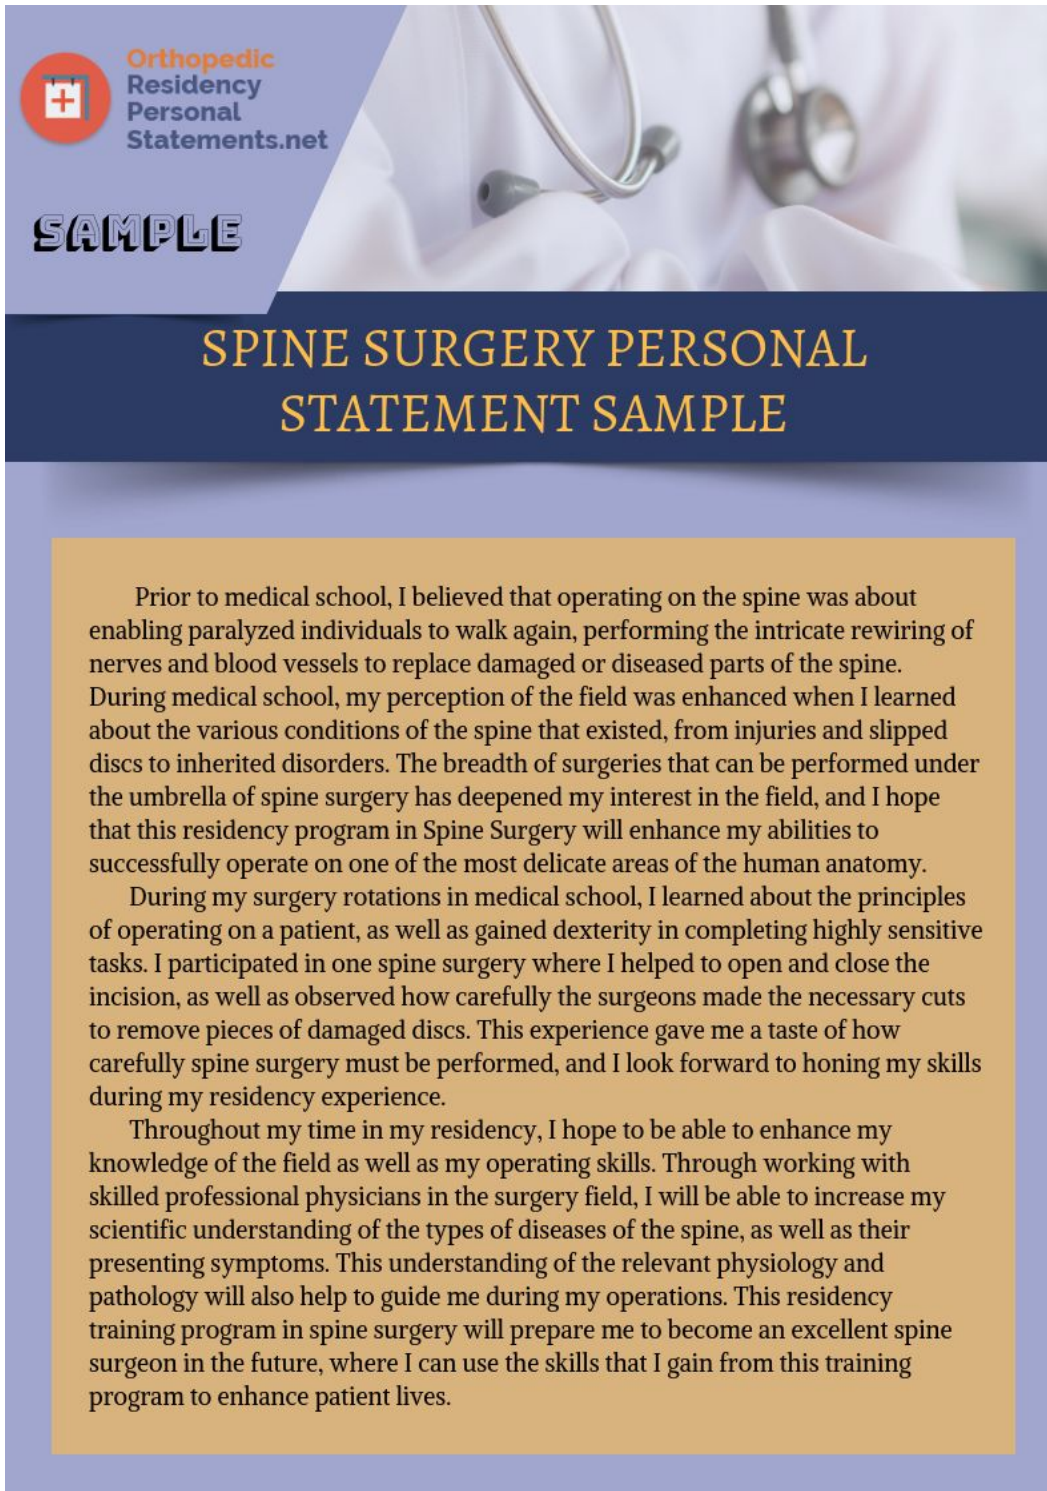

When my friend fractured his foot playing soccer, he was admitted to the hospital and taken to the orthopedics ward. At ten years old, my initial thoughts were that my friend would have to lose his foot when they called in the surgeon. Luckily, the procedure took only an hour, and he was let out of the hospital with a cast on his foot. This experience led me to start my own research into the orthopedic field and incited my interest in medicine. Now that I have completed my initial medical training, I hope to specialize in the field of Orthopedic Trauma through this specialized residency program.

During medical school, my studies and rotations showed me just how diverse the field of orthopedic trauma is. During my surgery rotations, I learned how to make small incisions that were minimally invasive but still allowed for manipulation of the injured parts. During my transplantation rotations, I learned that bones and joints could also be transplanted similarly to organs. These experiences gave me a taste of the types of work that I would be doing as an orthopedic trauma physician, and I believe that this residency program will provide me with the training that I will need to perform these procedures.

As a highly specialized field, I know that my training in residency will be invaluable in establishing my success as a physician. The mentored training that I will receive as a part of this program will allow me to learn from the experiences of professionals in the field, as well as receive insight as to what treatments could be applied in niche situations. This knowledge will greatly enhance my clinical skills, and I look forward to learning new techniques for treating a variety of different bone and joint diseases. Through this residency program, I hope to gain the skills that I will need to become an orthopedic trauma physician, helping to heal conditions of the bones and joints to enable patients to lead active and healthy lives.

SPINE SURGERY PERSONAL STATEMENT SAMPLE

Prior to medical school, I believed that operating on the spine was about enabling paralyzed individuals to walk again, performing the intricate rewiring of nerves and blood vessels to replace damaged or diseased parts of the spine. During medical school, my perception of the field was enhanced when I learned about the various conditions of the spine that existed, from injuries and slipped discs to inherited disorders. The breadth of surgeries that can be performed under the umbrella of spine surgery has deepened my interest in the field, and I hope that this residency program in Spine Surgery will enhance my abilities to successfully operate on one of the most delicate areas of the human anatomy.

During my surgery rotations in medical school, I learned about the principles of operating on a patient, as well as gained dexterity in completing highly sensitive tasks. I participated in one spine surgery where I helped to open and close the incision, as well as observed how carefully the surgeons made the necessary cuts to remove pieces of damaged discs. This experience gave me a taste of how carefully spine surgery must be performed, and I look forward to honing my skills during my residency experience.

Throughout my time in my residency, I hope to be able to enhance my knowledge of the field as well as my operating skills. Through working with skilled professional physicians in the surgery field, I will be able to increase my scientific understanding of the types of diseases of the spine, as well as their presenting symptoms. This understanding of the relevant physiology and pathology will also help to guide me during my operations. This residency training program in spine surgery will prepare me to become an excellent spine surgeon in the future, where I can use the skills that I gain from this training program to enhance patient lives.
