Does your Fire Escape Need Repairs?

The first step in managing a leaky roof is minimizing interior damage. This means rearranging furniture and removing valuables and covering surfaces with waterproof materials. In addition, make sure to soak up any standing water so it will not become trapped. If possible, apply plastic barriers to interior walls to help prevent water from seeping inside. Once the roof is repaired, you can begin using the new roof. But if you are worried that the leak will affect your walls or air conditioning system, it is best to contact a professional immediately.
