Introduction

Almost 75 years ago the gospel of Thomas (Thomas) was recovered among the manuscripts of Nag Hammadi. The first photographic edition was published in 1956, and its first critical analysis appeared in 1958 (Johannes Leipoldt, 'Das Evangelium nach Thomas'). Thousands of attempts have been made to interpret it: some placing it in a Biblical context, some in a Gnostic context, and some even in Buddhist and Zen contexts

One major issue has been the question of dependency between Thomas and the canonical gospels: was one party (partially) dependent on the other, or did they draw from a third source? There are dozens of parallels, but each of those gets applied differently, largely depending on the context they're in: Thomas, or the canonicals. No one has been able to readily discern the main character of Thomas,  $\bar{\tau}\epsilon$ , as the Jesus (likewise spelled  $\bar{\tau}\epsilon$  in the earliest manuscripts of the first few centuries) in the canonical gospels, or vice versa

There are many examples of how people have bent over backwards to try and make a case for both Thomas's and the canonical central characters,  $\bar{\tau}\epsilon$  and Jesus, being identical: they simply aren't. Indeed, there are similarities between the  $\bar{\tau}\epsilon$  of Thomas and the Jesus of the canonicals, but at best all we can say is: it is as if they were twins who got separated at birth; as if one grew up in the East in, say, a rich environment and the other in the West in, say, a poor environment

So please, erase your mind, delete your programming, and read the story about  $\bar{\tau}\epsilon$  as the text tells it

Translation explanation

The translation used is completely normalised, meaning that every Coptic word is translated to only one English word - and vice versa. It is a literal translation: fully transparent, traceable, and verifiable using hyperlinks to the Coptic words in the Coptic Dictionary Online (CDO) of KELLIA, the 'Koptische/Coptic Electronic Language and Literature International Alliance', an initiative of the German University of Göttingen. By the way, anything blue is a hyperlink; the underlining has been removed in order to give the text "a bit of rest". With over 25,000 hyperlinks the default underlining of a hyperlink became a real distraction

I believe all other translations of the gospel of Thomas to be problematic in many ways. Most, such as e.g. those of Doresse, Guillaumont, Quispel, Layton and Lambdin, appear to have taken many liberties with the text, interpreting its content through a Christian or "Gnostic" lens, but also by taking for granted the more mundane and superficial translation instead of digging for something with true meaning. That has resulted in dozens of words being mistranslated, and entire parables have been "harmonised" with the canonicals in the apparent lead - and sometimes even a mere comment by feverously anti-Thomas people like Origen has prevailed over the literal content of Thomas

The epitome of a distorted translation is logion 74, where a feminine article in combination with a masculine noun has led "translators" to look for another quite different noun. Logion 74, consisting of a mere 19 words, is the only place in the entire text of 6,500 words where the gender of the article conflicts with that of the noun itself - and it does so twice! What are the odds that such is accidental?

And even if one would be able to justify changing the critical apparatus, how could one possibly know the correct gender of the article to a noun yet not the noun itself? However, the most esteemed scholars (Guillaumont, Lambdin, Layton) have assumed just that, and simply exchanged two nouns for two quite different nouns without much if any comment. And all others have just followed their entirely comment-free lead, even so-called "literal translations"

I have not seen any translation that gets everything or even nearly everything right, save for those of Detlev Koepke and Thomas Paterson Brown that come close; feel free to use the CDO and my translation as very easy tools to both translate and verify exactly what I present that Thomas says. Doubts about a word? Just point and click, and verify: the scanned pages can be found, among others, at the Claremont College Digital Library, e.g. Page 1 - Codex II leaf 32 <https://ccd.claremont.edu/digital/collection/nha/id/2859>, where they also exist in high resolution (e.g. <https://ccd.claremont.edu/digital/iiif/nha/2859/full/full/o/default.jpg>, the so-called IIIF Image). These don't contain logion numbers, but those of Paterson Brown do, even though their resolution is minimised, in accordance with regular Web use: https://www.metalogos.org/files/th\_scan.html contains all the scans from 1 through 20, with logion pointers per Nag Hammadi Codex II leaf

As grateful as I am for KELLIA having realised the CDO, I am even more grateful for the wonderful website of the late Dr. Thomas Paterson Brown, <https://www.metalogos.org>. His magnificently detailed translation greatly helped me propel mine, and without a doubt his is the most detailed translation available, to which I add (quite a lot of) ease-of-use and just a little bit more detail, and a much more coherent and profound translation

This translation also serves as input to the Complete Thomas Commentary (book 2 of the trilogy) of which part II, the Prologue and the first 55 logia, has been published. Its level of detail is much greater than what is demonstrated here, and it spends 500 pages on 56 logia, carefully weighing and evaluating every single word. It will elaborate on Greek loanwords and their special metaphysical meaning, and explain why for some of them I have chosen their secondary or even tertiary meaning

On understanding the text and reading the dictionary

The main dictionaries will be briefly explained here and this small section contains very important information about relevant subtleties in the text of Thomas. In this Translations there are over 750 entries to dictionaries, all of which are online, and the entire goal is that everything can be verified with one single and simple click, so the reader can make up his own mind, with the very least effort

The translation consists of three rows, for example the first four words of the Prologue:

ⲛⲁⲉⲓ	ⲛⲉ	ⲛ̄	ⲱⲁⲗⲉ	- the literal text including all kinds of punctuation
ⲛⲁⲓ	ⲛⲉ	ⲛ-	ⲱⲁⲗⲉ	- the dictionary entry
these	are	the(PL)	word	- the English translation

The first row contains a perfect transcription of the text, verified and validated. Superlinears and apostrophes have been transcribed as best as possible, and lacunae have been mostly copied from the translations of Guillaumont and Layton (with logion 65 being a noticeable exception)

Everything in the second row is a dictionary entry and hyperlinked, like e.g. ⲛⲁⲓ. If a word there doesn't contain a hyperlink, like e.g. ⲛⲉ, then those can't be found in a dictionary and are either names or possessive pronouns or adjectives. The dictionary determines how the entry looks, hence the ⲛ̄ in the text is annotated as ⲛ- because that is exactly how it looks in the dictionary

The third row contains hyperlinks to this document itself, and those lead to the English-Coptic index (not every application used to read this document will provide an easy navigation back and forth from such a hyperlink, for instance Google PDF Reader doesn't have any, whereas Sumatra PDF (Windows) or ReadEra (Android) does)

On a handful of occasions, a hyperlink bypasses the main dictionary and goes straight into the Coptic manuscriptroom because the precise entry isn't in the main dictionary. On rare occasions a hyperlink leads into an entirely different dictionary, for example in the case of the Greek loanword ⲭⲏⲥⲓⲥ in logion 65. With regards to Greek loanwords; those are only briefly mentioned in the main dictionary and their details are found in the Perseus Digital Library of Tufts University, and the dictionary of my choice there is the dictionary of Middle Liddell.

An exemplary showcase to demonstrate the setup of the Coptic Dictionary Online (CDO) can be found in the Prologue, in one of its first words, ⲉⲛⲏ: a contraction of ⲉⲣ and ⲓⲛ. It was too cumbersome to find a way to annotate both words correctly without significantly changing the entire setup of the translation, so while it seems that the second word in the text is ⲏⲛ, it actually is ⲓⲛⲏ, and that ⲓⲛⲏ is a variant of the word found in the dictionary: ⲓⲛⲏ. A word can have many variants, which is inherent to different states of Coptic verbs and nouns but it is also due to differing dialects; dialects in Coptic are of great importance to the text of Thomas, as well as to the way in which the main dictionary is set up.

Clicking ⲓⲛⲏ leads to the CDO, and its entry will among others contain its Bibliography, the first link of which is: CD 695a-696a.

Clicking that link will lead to Crum's dictionary, part of the "Digital Edition of the Coptic Old Testament":

Page 695a of Crum will show ⲓⲛⲏ halfway the page, directly followed by 'SAA²BF' (here underlined in red): these are the dialects that contain this exact form, and a form can exist in more than one dialect whereas dialects can also have multiple forms. In the notation of the dialects the S stands for Sahidic, the A for Akhmimic, the A² for SubAkhmimic, the B for Bohairic and the F for Fayyumic

The ⲓⲛⲏ from the text can be found (here underlined in red) one line below the main entry, and the dialects behind it are identical to those behind the main entry ⲓⲛⲏ (as it concerns a so-called Stative, see below), yet usually that is not the case, as can be seen with the other forms present in this entry

The text of Thomas presumably is an odd mixture between Sahidic, Akhmimic and SubAkhmimic, and those are the dialects to look for in Crum. The CDO will always have the first word that appears in Crum, its main entry point

The † (dagger) behind the form ⲓⲛⲏ in the dictionary example indicates that it is the Stative (previously, as e.g. in Crum, called Qualitative) verb form, an important Coptic form that expresses "the result of verbal action, the effect or state produced by an action, the quality which it finally produces. In contrast to the infinitive of intransitive verbs it suggests the permanent character of the verbal action effected". In this translation the hyperlink is suffixed with "+" to indicate that the original form in the text is the Stative, e.g. ⲗⲟⲛⲏ+ in logion o of the translation

The single hyphen behind a verb or word (e.g. ⲗⲉⲡⲏ-, see Figure 1Crum 695a \(ⲗⲟⲛⲏ\)) indicates that it must be followed by a noun (it expresses the nominal form), the double hyphen (e.g. ⲗⲟⲛⲏ-, see Figure 1Crum 695a \(ⲗⲟⲛⲏ\)) indicates that it must be followed by a pronoun (it expresses the pronominal form)

Verbs in Coptic are transitive or intransitive or both. Rarely is there a different meaning for the transitive versus the intransitive form, and only when there is, is the verb in the translation suffixed with an apostrophe ('), e.g. ⲗⲉⲡⲏ' in logion io. Again, the goal of the translation is to be as precise and clear as possible, not to give a perfect and complete grammatical breakdown of every little detail - hence why the intransitive form of a verb is only indicated when its meaning differs from the transitive form and the latter is also used in Thomas. The transitive form of the Stative is translated by using the Past Perfect tense, e.g. 'befouled' (ⲃⲟⲩⲧⲉ+) in logion 7, while that of the intransitive is translated by suffixing the verb with -ing, e.g. 'be-living' (ⲟⲩⲛⲉ+) in logion o

Clicking on the Coptic will lead to KELLIA, clicking on the English will lead to the English-Coptic index. A few words have no hyperlink: names, and most possessives. For the possessives and some adjectives I have taken the instructions by Plumley that have been written down so very carefully by Dr. Paterson Brown - one exception to that is triggered by the words of B. Layton in 'B Layton (1994) Nag Hammadi Codex II, 2-7 together with XIII,2' where he states in his introductory Dialect and Orthography, point 6, that the entire Codex uses the Akhmimic / Sub-Akhmimic possessive article 'ⲟⲩ' instead of 'ⲉⲩ' for the third person plural (thus swapping those for the second person singular, feminine): hence, read ⲛⲉⲩ where it says ⲛⲟⲩ, ⲧⲉⲩ where it says ⲧⲟⲩ, etcetera - the differences are expressed by the second translation row containing the regular Sahidic forms.

With the goal of the translation being that every single word and letter be translated, an issue posed itself with the so-called direct object prefix of Coptic, a word that under certain circumstances is mandatory to be used in front of the direct object. It can be either an ⲛ- or an ⲉ-, and those can change into their pronominal forms ⲛⲛⲟⲩ and ⲉⲡⲟⲩ as well, and they can't be translated into English in this context but are marked instead with '[dop]', which stands for 'direct object prefix'.

Similarly, there is a so-called adjective linker, which links the adjective to its noun; as it has no function in English it is marked with [al] which stands for exactly that: adjective linker.

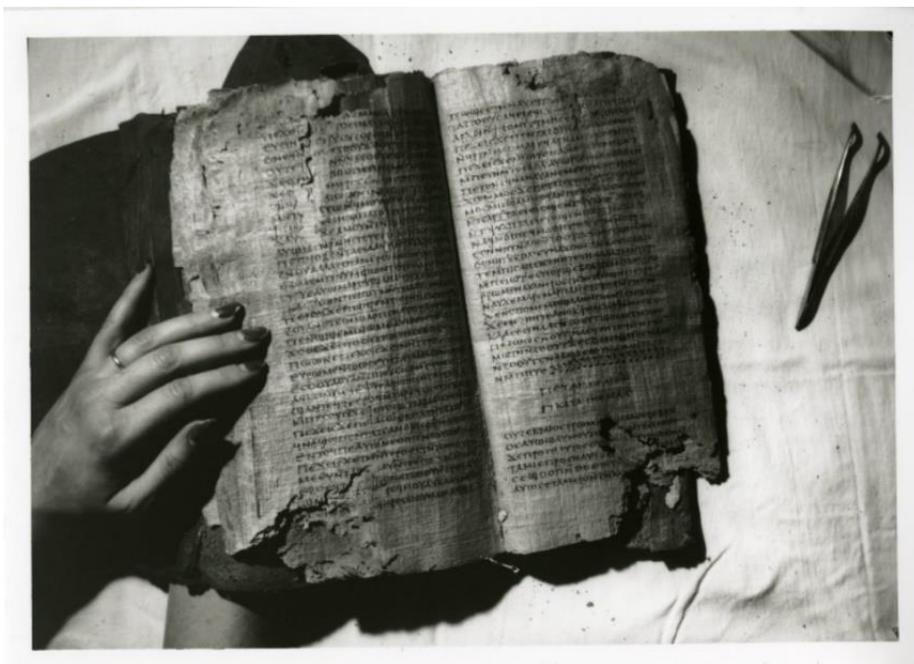

Last but not least, the text has been checked for being completely attested to by any of the main Coptic dictionaries, including its dialect variant(s):

- J. Černý - "Coptic Etymological Dictionary", Cambridge, 1976
- P. Cherix - "Lexique copte sahidique", V.19.1, 2006-2019
- W. E. Crum - "A Coptic Dictionary", Oxford, 1938
- W. Vychičl - "Dictionnaire Étymologique de la langue Copte", Leuven, 1983
- W. Westendorf - "Koptisches Handwörterbuch", Heidelberg, 1965 / 1977

There is only two handful of words that are not attested for, and those are marked by a tilde (~) being suffixed to the English translation; some words are not attested for in Crum or other dictionaries, yet I have managed to find them in texts: those have not been marked. For a complete overview of all non-Sahidic dialects, weakly attested and unattested words in Thomas, consult Thomas dictionary attestations and exceptions to Sahidic / \(Sub\)Akhmimic

A word on ancient texts

An important fact about the text is that beginnings and endings of sentences are completely arbitrary: the text of Thomas is one long consecutive string of letters, as are all ancient texts: papyrus was expensive and putting something in writing, fixating it in history for posterity, was the goal in itself

Likewise, the logion numbering is completely arbitrary, and entirely made up by the first translators: the existing numbering is just followed, and while it is a handy and pragmatic common denominator for all, in my eyes it holds no value at all to (the text of) Thomas

The division of the text in this Translation is ad-hoc and opportunistic; the aim is to "make it kind of legible" without using commas and periods - but do keep in mind that even that is an intrusion, an attempt to interpret what Thomas had in mind. The Commentary has an Interpretation section per logion, but those are justified and elaborated on

The text is not entirely complete, there are so-called lacunae in it, 'holes', because the papyrus is missing or the ink not legible (enough). There are elaborate ways to distinguish between different types of lacunae, indicating for instance certainty concerning the length and type of letters, but in this translation a letter is indicated a lacuna when there is more than 1 choice in reading it. Lacunae are surrounded by square brackets, [ and ], for example ⲉ[ⲡⲉ]Ⲅⲏⲧⲁ in logion 8.

Scribal errors are corrections made by the scribe, and surrounded by curly brackets, { and }, for example ⲛⲁ{ⲗ} in logion 18.

One final form of textual anomaly can occur when the last letter of a line is an ⲛ; sometimes that ⲛ is dropped and replaced by a superlinear - which in the transcription is indicated by an underscore, _, for example ⲄⲟⲮⲱ_ in logion 3.

Translation principles

The goals behind the translation are twofold: to make the purest translation possible, and to make it fully traceable: each word is accounted for and can be verified with one single click by everyone, if only there is access to the Internet.

Anyone can verify every word of this translation, anyone can deep-dive into the original Coptic text of Thomas. And the translation is fully normalised: every Coptic word has its own English word, and vice versa. Doubts about a translated word? Click the Coptic word that leads to the full dictionary; compare it to similar words, their shared root(s) and origin(s), and make up your mind

The five translation principles are as follows:

- One word in - one word out
  - For each unique Coptic word, one unique English word is picked. To illustrate this: the Lambdin translation uses two words in logion 65 - 'master' and 'owner' - for the exact same Coptic word ⲁⲟⲉⲓⲉ; and in logion 73 and 74 he translates that with 'Lord'; it is all very inconsistent. A translation must be precise: if a certain word is chosen as the translation of a word, don't pick another on translating its next occurrence. A true translation knows no synonyms
- One word out - one word in

- For each English word there can't be any more than one single Coptic word: if e.g. ⲭⲟⲉⲓⲥ is translated with master, then there can be no other Coptic word that is also translated with master (Lambdin translates Ⲙⲁⲗ in logion 13 also with 'master'). If Thomas went through the trouble of picking a different word, then so must we. A true translation knows no homonyms
- Full normalisation is the basis for every good translation
  - By combining these two goals, complete and full normalisation is achieved: the text is literally translated from Coptic into English with the absolute smallest number of changes possible; it is as close as we can get to the original text. Others might have claimed that feat, but this is the only way to achieve it: make an index of source as well as destination, and completely normalise both
- Emendations must be motivated at length
  - The text says what it says, period. It is cryptic, enigmatic, riddling: this is not prose, it's poetry, and full of wordplay. If one doesn't understand it, then it is not the text that is causing the problem, and it surely should not be changed, most certainly not without a solid argumentation - let alone without not even as much as a footnote. Most "scholars" like to make the text wrong in order to make themselves right, and they don't even think twice about it, let alone that they supply motivation - although there are rare exceptions to that rule.
The general advice is to read Thomas without any agenda whatsoever; just pretend it is the very first text ever read
- Content determines context - not vice versa
  - Thomas is unique. There is no other text like it: riddling, mystic, playing cat-and-mouse between I(H)S and the disciples, seemingly chaotic and disorderly, at first sight without much if any story that evolves. So, in order to interpret anything of what Thomas says in another context than his own, there must be unambiguous proof or evidence that said context was guaranteed to be created before his was

...and their trade-off

There is a trade-off to very strictly applying these principles, naturally, and that is legibility: with every word literally translated, there is no room for e.g. singular or plural nouns, even though there are virtually none in Coptic: words equal word, fishes equals fish, and so on - it is the article or pronoun preceding it that "makes it plural". On those rare occasions where a Coptic noun in the text is explicitly plural it is translated as such, and there is only one exception on top of that: in order to stress the fact that (also) the word 'heavens' is used by Thomas, its hyperlink bypasses the CDO and leads straight into Crum (that is, the CoptOT manuscript room, of which the Crum Coptic Dictionary is one of its Digital Resources just like the CDO itself is).

English itself poses issues as it is a lot less specific than Coptic when it comes to gender and number: in English there is room for only one form of articles and some pronouns, and where these deviate from "the rule", their singular or plural property will be added between parenthesis; for instance 'you' is ambiguous in English so when not singular it will say 'you(PL)'. The article 'the' is mostly singular, so it will say 'the(PL)' when it's not - and it is up to the reader to handle the corresponding nouns and "read them in plural". Gender defaults to masculine, so when different it will be indicated by (F).

The possessives have different forms, indicating gender and number - for both the "object" as well as the "subject". I have used the concepts of Source and Target in order to prevent confusion; the object is what it is about and the Target is who it is linked to: Coptic always starts with identifying the Source, and I distinguish between singular and plural as well as masculine and feminine: the default is singular, and masculine (note the comma!). Only singular forms distinguish between genders, plurals don't. A few examples best illustrate the notation, and for the purpose of exemplification I also show the reversed order of English, which always puts the Target first and the Source last:

His woman - woman-his; τλ- + ητοϩ = τεϩ; his(F). (default is singular; hence the lack of that notation).

His women - women-his; ηλ- + ητοϩ = ηεϩ; his(PL) (no gender indication for plural).

Her man - man-hers; ηλ- + Ϸ- = ηεϷ; her (default is masculine, and singular; hence the lack of that notation).

Given the fact that in English the 2nd person is identical in singular as well as plural, explicit notation is used on every occasion:

A single man is addressed: Your woman - woman-your; τλ- + -κ = τεκ; your(F.SG).

More than one single man is addressed: Your women - women-your; ηλ- + -τη = ηετη; your(PL.PL) (default is masculine, no gender indication for plural).

More than one single man is addressed: Your woman - woman-your; τλ- + -τη = τετη; your(F.PL) (no gender indication for plural).

All this is of the utmost importance as Thomas makes great use of both gender and number, and on rare occasions a word is suffixed by an asterisk (*) in order to draw attention to it.

It is quite a "wooden" translation this way, and I have had to make a handful of choices, very reluctantly, in order to live up to this very ambitious goal. There are words that have many, many meanings, and occur quite frequently as well. One such word is ερε: 'act; become, befall; do / make, do; make, bear fruit; pass (time); make (total), amount to; make (price), value at') - and I used 'make-be' as the single translation to apply to all, including its use with 'light verbs' where those are literally translated. Why? Because it is used transitively throughout Thomas; either the verb exists in the absolute form and is used with a direct object, including its direct object prefix; or it is used in the pronominal form or, almost always, in the nominal form - and the translations given above don't just apply to the verb as-is, they apply either to its intransitive use ('act, become / befall, do') or its transitive use ('make / do, bear fruit, pass time, amount to, value at'). The last two translations are interpretations of 'make total' and 'make price' and its transitive use is best translated with the verb 'make-be (into)'. A word closely related is ϩωηε ('become, befall, be, exist') and I used 'come-to-be' as translation - and it is an intransitive verb. ϣητ is a different beast, and means both heart and mind, and I translate it as such - impossible to pick either, as meaningful as it is that this word indeed does mean both.

There are only four exceptions: I can't make a textual distinction between ⲕⲟⲗⲧ and ⲕⲁⲧⲉ for 'fire' (and there is a very legit reason for that), and out of the 98 occurrences of 'ⲥ' (she/her) I've translated 28 with 'it' (26 of those are preceded by the verb ⲭⲱ, 'say'). Four times have I translated an article with a vocative 'oh' (logion 13, 61, 74 and 106), and 4 times have I translated the verb 'ⲕⲱ' with 'permit' instead of 'place' (logion 21, 39, 57 and 102).

On rare occasions, I have chosen words that are not immediately in the Coptic dictionary: 'Need' for both the verb ⲭⲣⲱ and the noun ⲭⲣⲏⲙⲁ. The usual translations for the latter are 'property' and 'wealth', both of which Thomas doesn't care for, yet its Greek origin does mean 'need'. There is the word 'wealth' in Thomas, but that is meant to indicate knowledge, not material possessions. Speaking of Greek words, I agree with Detlev Koepke (The Jesus of the Gospel of Thomas) that in Thomas 'Greek is used to express philosophical or abstract concepts that are not found in Egyptian' (p. 11). For instance, the word ⲁⲣⲭⲏ means 'beginning' just as ⲗⲏ does, but figures prominently in logion 18 - and only there. Every single Greek loanword is capitalised in order to highlight their importance and special meaning; as such, ⲁⲣⲭⲏ is translated with 'Beginning' in order to distinguish it from its Coptic equivalent. There are quite a few Greek loanwords without a Coptic equivalent, for instance the words for 'peace' and 'war' - those have been capitalised as well, but it is questionable whether they have a deeper meaning

To please the general reader, there is The English translation of Thomas, placed prior to the Coptic-English one since version 1.9.5, and it starts at page 12. It contains markers for lacunae (which arguably are completely arbitrary as it is nigh impossible to mark via an English translation which Coptic letters are missing from a word), and it is much better legible than the one supplied via the interactive translation, while still adhering to the Coptic words and order as much as possible - and new* and fire* are translated 'fresh' and 'flame' in an attempt to have a comment-free English translation

Version management

I have verified every single lemma, every single stroke of the pen, and I guarantee that this transcription, since version 1.5, is 100% accurate and in perfect compliance with the papyrus scans such as can be found at e.g. Claremont College Digital Library (discussed above), the website of the late Dr. Thomas Paterson Brown or the Gnostic Society Library. The last leaf (logion 109 and further) is barely legible at the top, I have just followed what others "best-guess" there

Version 1.5 contained the first major revision and also a bit of harmonisation; the first version was broken down too much at some instances, and v1.5 e.g. pulled together ⲃⲠⲕ and ⲉⲗⲟⲅⲏ into ⲃⲠⲕ (ⲉⲗⲟⲅⲏ) as well as ⲉⲃⲟⲗ and ⲗⲏ- into ⲉⲃⲟⲗ ⲗⲏ-, to name a few. A first version always leaves some to be desired, and it was with great haste that I published it on February 29th 2020 after only a handful of months of learning Coptic, 163 days after publishing my 'Translation versus interpretation in Thomas: the perplexing treatment of logion 74' which started all this

Version 1.7 was validated for proper use of the Stative and introduced the double concordance, and added some visual enhancements such as removing the underlining to hyperlinks

Version 1.8 was stable and "perfect enough" and came with Part I of the Commentary, and this version (v1.9) comes with Part II; on average one or two words per logion of the remaining 59 logia might change before v2.0 is out: going through every single logion with a fine toothcomb as part of completing my Commentary in order to lay out its precise interpretation inevitably leads to reconsidering a word here and there, and for many logia there is an underlying translation, for example the 'forearm' in logion 35 which finally puts it all in a sensible perspective: not a very intrusive change, to translate ⲭⲚⲁⲉ with its primary meaning instead of its secondary one, yet a tremendously significant one, and a change nonetheless

Version 1.9.5 was released after publication of transcription and translation in the Coptic Scriptorium and contains the first fully legible translation; the intention is to provide everyone with a strict transliteration of the Coptic without offending legibility (while obviously allowing for some archaic constructions)

Version 2.0 will be the last and final one, when the remaining part(s) of the Complete Thomas Commentary (book 2 of the trilogy) have been published. The full translation (both Coptic-English and English) will remain in here with both indices and concordances and it will consist of some 250 pages, whereas the complete commentary will be in there, comprising some 1,000 pages. Quantity doesn't equate to quality, and perhaps I will find a way to be more concise in the future, but at the moment this is what it is. I have so much to say, and I must say all of it, and in great detail. And even that will be only a minute fraction of what needs to be said, as no amount of words will ever be enough to cover that which lies hidden behind Thomas, and what has been hidden for two millennia...

A final word on navigation: if the application used to read this document doesn't support something like a back arrow to navigate back where you came from, after clicking a link that leads you to another place in the document, there is an old way of navigating that works on desktop / laptop: on a keyboard there is the left ALT key, and when simultaneously pressed with the left arrow key that will bring you back where you came from

English translation of Thomas

Lacunae dictate the flow of the phrase that they exist in, as the words that are guessed to be in them must be in the exact form and order; they are relatively few in number yet hamper legibility. Greek loanwords are capitalised because they usually (unless Coptic has no equivalent at all) convey a higher metaphysical meaning, and to prevent confusion with words that start a sentence, all sentences are decapitalised (unless they start with a Greek loanword). To distinguish between singular and plural 2nd person pronouns, the archaic English thou (thee, thy, thine) is used for 2nd person singular alone.

- o. these ones are the words which are hiding; IS who is living has said them, and Didymos Judas Thomas wrote them
1. and he said: he who will fall to the Interpretation of these words will not take taste of the death
2. IS said there is no way to make him cease, viz. he who seeks; he seeks until he finds, and Whenever he should find, he will be disturbed: and if he should be disturbed, he will wonder - and he will make king upon the all
3. IS said: if they should say it to you, viz. they who go before you: 'lo behold, the kingdom in the heaven', well then the birds will make it to the heaven earlier than you; if they should say it to you: 'she in the Sea', well then the fishes will make it earlier than you; Rather, the kingdom is of your inside, and of your eye. Whenever you should know you, Then they will know you, and you will understand: yourselves are the children of the father who is living. if it befalls However you will not know you, well then you are existing in a poverty and yourselves are the poverty
4. IS said he will not delay, viz. the human, old person in his days, to make cease a little young child, he in seven days, because of the Place of the life; and he will live: there are many first who will become last, and they come to be one single
5. IS said know him who is within the presence of thy outward face, and he who is hiding to thee will uncover outward to thee. there is not anyone Indeed hiding who will not reveal outward
6. they questioned him, viz. his Disciples, they said to him: does thou desire that we Fast, and what is the manner that we will pray, give Alms and Observe what within food? IS said: do not tell lies, and that which you hate do not do it: they are all uncovering outward within the outward presence of the heaven. there is not anyone Indeed hiding who will not reveal outward, and there is not anyone covering who will remain with lack of being uncovered
7. IS said a Fortunate is the lion, this one who the human will eat him; and the lion being becomes man - and he befouled, viz. the human, this one who the lion will eat him; and the lion will come to be human

8. And he said: the human is comparable to a fisher, become man of heart/mind; this one has cast his dragnet to the Sea. he drew her up from the Sea, she being full of fish; little within upper part of heart/mind. he fell to a great good fish: the fisher, become man of heart/mind, cast all the little fishes outw[ard], do[wnw]ard to the Sea. he chose the great fish: Exempt from toil. he whom there are ears within him to hear, let him hear
9. IS said: lo behold he came forth, he who throw sows; he filled his hand, he cast: Whilst some fell upon the path, the birds came, they gathered them. some another fell upon the Rock, and did not take root downward to the earth, and did not put forth heads of grain upward to the heaven. and some another fell upon the Acacias nilotica; they choked the seed, and the worm ate them. and some another fell upon the good earth, and he gave Fruit upward to the heaven, good. he came of sixty per arrow, and hundred twenty per arrow
10. IS said: I cast a fire upon the World, and lo behold, I guard him until he blazes
11. IS said: this heaven will Lead astray, and you above her will Lead astray; and they who are dead are not living, and they who are living will not die. the days you ate him who is dead, you made him into he who is living; Whenever you should come to be in the light, who will you make him into? in the days you been made one, you made the two; Whenever However you should come to be two, who will you make him into?
12. the Disciples said to IS: we know that thou will go from the hand of us; who is it who will become great upward upon us? IS said to them: the place you have come inthere, you will go toward Jacob the Righteous: this one has the heaven with the earth come to be because of him
13. IS said to his Disciples: compare me, and say it to me: I resemble who? he said to him, viz. Simon Peter: thou resembles a Righteous Me[ss]enger; he said to him, viz. Matthew: thou resembles a human Philosopher, man of heart/mind; he said to him, viz. Thomas: oh writer, Wholly, my mouth will not receive it to say it: thou resembles who? IHS said: myself not thy writer: Since thou drank, thou became drunk, out of the Fountain which boils - this one, I myself, have measured her. and he took him, he Withdrew; he said to him three words. after that Thomas However came to his friends, they questioned him: what has IS said to thee? he said to them, viz. Thomas: if I should say to you one in the words he has said to me, you will carry stone, and you cast to me; and a fire comes out of the stones, and she* burns you
14. IS said to them: if you should Fast, you will beget to you a sin; and if you should pray, they will Condemn you; and if you should give Alms, you will make an Evil one of your Spirits. and if you should go inward to a certain earth, and you walk in the Lands: if they should Accept you, he whom they will place him at you - eat him; they who are sick of their heart/mind - Heal them. he who will go Indeed inward in your mouth will not defile you; Rather, he who is coming from your mouth, it is he who will defile you
15. IS said: Whenever you should behold him who they did not beget from the woman, bend you self upon your face, and you worship him: he who inthere is your father

16. IS said: Perhaps they think, viz. the humans: I have come to cast a Peace upon the World, and they know not: I have come to cast some divisions upon the earth; a fire, a sword, a War. there are Indeed five who will come to be in a house; there are three who will come to be upon two, and two upon three: the father upon the child, and the child upon the father - and they will stand to their feet, in case they been made Single One
17. IS said: I will give to you him who no eye beheld, and him who no ear heard, and him who no hand touched, and who did not come up on the heart/mind of human
18. the Disciples said to IS: say it to us; our end, she will come to be in what manner? IS said did you uncover Indeed outward the Beginning, in order that you will seek after the end? in the place which the Beginning inthere, the end will come to be inthere. a Fortunate, he who will stand to his feet in the Beginning, and he will know the end; and he will not take taste of death
19. IS said: a Fortunate, he who has come to be at the beginning, prior to that he comes to be. if you should come to be Disciples to me, and you hear my words, these stones will Serve to you. you Indeed have inthere the five trees in Paradise; they move not, within summer, within winter, and not usually their leaves fall outward. he who will know them, will not take taste of death
20. the Disciples said to IS: say it to us; the kingdom of the heavens is comparable to what? he said to them: she is comparable to a grain of mustard, being few, More than all the seeds. Whenever However she should fall upon the earth which they do work on, habitually he puts forth outward a great branch; and he comes to be Protection of birds of the heaven
21. Mariham said to IS: thy Disci[ple]s resemble who? he said: they resemble some young children who are [vi]siting a field, which theirs not is; Whenever they should come, viz. the slaveowners of the field, they will say it: dismiss our field to us. they themselves make naked of their outward presence, to cause them to dismiss her to them; and they give their field to them. Therefore I say it: if he should understand, viz. the slaveowner in house: he is coming, viz. the man who steals; he will be awake prior to that he comes, and not permit him to excavate inward to his house of his kingdom, that he carries his House gear. yourselves However be awake at the beginning of the World; bind you upon your loins in a great Power, So that the Robbers will not fall to path to come toward you. Since there is Necessity, you look outward toward her: they will fall to her. let him come to be in your middle, viz. a human of Understanding; after that the Fruit split, he came in a hurry, his sickle in his hand; he covered him up. he who there are ears within him to hear, let him hear
22. IS beheld some little persons take milk. he said to his Disciples: these little persons who take milk are comparable to they who are going inward to the kingdom. they said to him: well then, we been made little persons, we will go inward to the kingdom? IHS said to them: Whenever you should make the two one, and if you should make the inside part in the manner of the outside part, and the outside part in the manner of the inside part, and the part of the heaven in the manner of the part of the ground, So that you will make the male with the woman to that one single, in order that the male will not make male, and the woman make woman. Whenever you should make some eyes to the place of an eye, and a hand to the place of their hands, and feet to the place of feet; an Image to the place of an Image: Then you will go inward [to the kingdom]

23. IS said: I will cho[os]e you, one out of thousand, and two out of ten thousand; and they will stand to their feet, in case they been made one single
24. his Disciples said: go on, show us the Place where thou are, Since Force causes us to seek after him. he said to them: he who there are ears within him, let him hear: there is light existing within the inside of a man of light, and he lights the entire World. in case he does not light, a darkness {it} is
25. IS said: love thy brother in the manner of thy Soul, Guard him in the manner of the pupil of thy eye
26. IS said: the speck which in the eye of thy brother, thou behold him; the beam However which in thy eye, thou behold him not. Whenever thou should cast the beam from thy eye, Then thou will behold outward to cast the speck from the eye of thy brother
27. in case you do not Fast to the World, you will not fall to the kingdom; in case you do not make the Sabbath {into} Father's Day(sAB'BAth), you will not behold the father
28. IS said: I stood to foot in the middle of the World, and I revealed outward to them in Flesh. I fell to them all drunk, I did not fall to anyone in them thirsting; and my Soul gave pain upon the children of the humans: some blind persons they are in their heart/mind, and they do not see: they have come to the World, they empty, they also seek to cause them come forth in the World, they empty. Nevertheless now they are being drunk; Whenever they should cast off their wine, Then they will Conceive afterwards
29. IS said if the Flesh has come to be because of Spirit, a wonder is {the flesh}; if Spirit However because of the Body, a wonder [of wonder] is {the Body}. Rather, I myself wonder this one: Ho[w] did [this] great reign of rich man dwell in this poverty?
30. IS said: the place where there are three gods, some gods are; the place where there are two Or one: I myself am existing with him
31. IS said there is no Prophet receiving in his village; not usually {a} physician Heals them who know him
32. IS said: in case they built a City from upon a mountain, in case he is high, in case she made strong: no strength can make her fall, Nor will she be able to hide
33. IS said that which thou will hear in thy ear, in the other ear proclaim it; from upon your* roofs: not usually anyone Indeed ignites a lamp, and places him at {his} ear, Nor does he place him in a hiding place. Rather, habitually he places him upon the Lampstand, in order that every one who is going inward, and who is coming forth, will behold his light

34. IS said: if a blind person should go before a blind person, habitually they fall both together, downward to a pit
35. IS said one does not have the strength to go inward to the house of the strong, and he takes him by forearm; Unless he binds his hands - Then he will turn outward his house
36. IS said there is no carrying concern, starting from morning toward evening, and starting from evening toward morning; who is it who will clothe you
37. his Disciples said: what day will thou reveal outward to us, and what day will behold thee. IS said: Whenever you should strip you of your shame, and you carry your garments, and you place them at the bottom of your feet in the manner of those little young children; and you tread them: The[n you will beh]old the child of he who is living, and you will not fear
38. IS said: many occasions you Desired to hear these words; these ones, I say them to you - and you do not have other one to hear them from his hand. there are some days that will come to be, and you seek after me - you will not fall to me
39. IS said: the Pharisees with the Scribes, they took the keys of the Knowledge; they hid them. Neither do they go inward, and they do not permit them who desire to go inward. yourselves However come to be Prudent ones in the manner of the serpents, and Pure ones in the manner of the doves
40. IS said a vine of grape, they planted her within the outside part of the father; and she is not made strong - they will pluck her out at her root, and she is destroyed
41. IS said: he who has him in his hand, they will give to him - and he who does not have him, the other young thing that he has they will carry him from his hand
42. IS said: come to be in case you Lead astray
43. they said to him, viz. his Disciples: who thou? thou say these ones to us. in these: I say them to you, and you do not understand who myself is? Rather, you yourselves came to be in the manner of those Judeans: they love the tree, they hate his Fruit; and they love the Fruit, they hate the tree
44. IS said: he who will say one to the father, they will dismiss him, and he who will say one to the child, they will dismiss him; he who will say one However to the Spirit who is pure, they will not dismiss him; Neither in the earth Nor in the heaven
45. IS said not usually they collect grape out of Acacias nilotica, Nor usually they gather fig out of caltrop; not usually they give Fruit [Indeed. a Go]od human habitually resembles a Good one out o[f] his treasure; a B[ad] human habitually resembles some Wicked things out of his treasure, who wicked, who in his heart/mind: and he says some Wicked things outward. Indeed in the greater part of the heart/mind habitually he produces some Wicked things

46. IS said: starting from Adam toward Johannes the Immerser, in the births of the women there is not he who is high to Johannes the Immerser So that will not break his eyes. I said it However: he who will come to be in you, been made little person, he will know the kingdom, and he will be high to Johannes
47. IS said: a human does not have the strength of being mounted on two horses, and he stretches two bows. and a slave does not have the strength to serve two slaveowners Or he will Honour the one and the other one he will Hubrize him; not usually a human drinks old wine and within the hour Desires to drink new wine; and not usually they cast new wine to old Wineskin, in order that they will not split; and not usually they cast old wine to new Wineskin So that he will not destroy him; not usually they glue old rag to fresh garment, Since Surely a split will come to be

89. IS said: because of what do you wash the outside part of the Cup, do you not Conceive: he who has created the inside part, he is also he who has created the outside part
90. IHS said: come toward me: a Chrestos* is my yoke, and my reign of slaveowner is a man of fever, and you will fall to a Repose* to you
91. they said to him: say it to us; thou who? So that we will Believe thee. he said to them: you Tempt the face of the heaven with the earth, and you did not know him who is of your outward presence, and this Time you do not know to Tempt him
92. IS said: seek, and you will find: Rather, they who you questioned me about in those days, I did not say them to you. in the day which is inthere now, I am willing to say them - and you do not seek after them
93. do not give him who is pure to the dogs, in order that they will not cast them to the Manure mound; do not cast the Pear[ls to the] pigs So that they will not make him [to fr]ag[ment]
94. IS [said] he who seeks, he will find; [he who summons in]ward, they will open to him
95. [IS said: if i]t befalls you have copper, do not give the interest; Rather, [give him to him] from whose hand you did not take them
96. IS [said]: the kingdom of the father is compar[able to a] woman. she took a little colostrum, [she hi]d him in a dough; she made him {into} some g[reat] loaves. he who there are ears within him, le[t him he]ar
97. IS said: the kingdom of the [father] is comparable to a woman: she bears under a ja[r] full of flour. she walks [on a] path, distant. the ear of the ja[r] broke, the flour poured after [her on] the path. was she not knowing? did she not understand to toil? after that she split inward to her house, she placed the jar downward: she fell to him empty
98. IS said the kingdom of the father is comparable to a human; he desires to kill a human, Mighty one. he drew forth the sword in his house; he separated her, the wall, in order that he will understand his hand to be strong inward. Then he slaughtered the Mighty one
99. the Disciples said to him: thy brothers with thy mother are standing to their feet on the outside part. he said to them: they of these places who do the desire of my father, these ones are my brothers with my mother; themselves will go inward to the kingdom of my father

100. they showed IS a gold, and said to him: they who are valuing Caesar demand of us the taxes. he said to them: give those of Caesar to Caesar, give those of the god to the god, and he who mine is give him to me
101. he who will hate his fa[ther no]t with his mother in my manner will not be able to become Di[sciple to] me, and he who will love hi[s father not with h]is mother in my manner will not be able to become Di[sciple to] me. my mother Indeed has [she brought forth my Body out]ward; [my mother] However true, she gave to me the life
102. IS said[: w]oe to them, the Pharisees! they rese[mble a] dog who sleeps from upon the manger of [some] oxen: he Neither eats Nor [permits] the oxen to eat
103. IS said: a Fo[rtu]nate is the human, this one who knows i[n what] Share the Robbers are coming inward; So t[hat he wi]ll arise, and assembles his reign of [king, a]nd he binds him upon his loins [in the] beginning - prior to that they come inward
104. they said [to IS]: come, and we pray today, and we Fast. IS said: what Indeed is the sin that I have made, Or in what have they become strong to me? Rather, Whenever the Bridegroom should come forth in the Nymphone, Then let them Fast and let them pray
105. IS said: he who will know the father with the mother, they will call him: the child of Prostitute
106. IS said: Whenever you should make the two one, you will come to be child of the human, and if you should say it: oh mountain, turn outward - he will turn
107. IS said: the kingdom is comparable to a human shepherd who has inthere a hundred sheep. one of their heart/mind went astray, the great; he placed the ninety nine, he sought after that one until he fell to him. after that he toiled, he said to the sheep: I desire thee More than the ninety nine
108. IS said: he who will drink from my mouth will come to be being drunk; I myself likewise will come to be as he is, and they who are hiding will reveal to him
109. IS said: the kingdom is comparable to a human who has [ther]ein in his field a treasure, h[iding; he] been made without his knowing. and a[fter to c]ause him die, he placed him to his [child. was the] child not knowing, he carried the field which inthere, he gave [her outward; and he who h]as bought her came, he ploughed: [he fell] to the treasure. he Began to give copper to the interest to [them who] he desired
110. IS said: he who has found the World and made a rich man, let him Deny the World

111. IS said: the heavens will curl up, and the earth, within your outward presence; and he who is living from he who is living will not behold death. not only IS says it: he who will fall to him self, the World is not worthy of him
112. IS said: woe to the Flesh, this one who has hung the Soul! woe to the Soul, this one who has hung the Flesh!
113. they said to him, viz. his Disciples: the kingdom is coming within what day? she is not coming in a look outward, they will not say it: lo behold that one part, Or lo behold that one. Rather, the kingdom of the father is spread outward from upon the earth, and the humans do not behold her
114. Simon Peter said to them: let Mariham come forth of our heart/mind: the women are not worthy of the life. IS said: lo behold, I myself will draw her, in order that I will make her male; So that she will come to be, likewise her, a Spirit who is living - he resembles you males: every woman, in case she will make her male, will go inward to the kingdom of the heavens

English-Coptic index

The 'Translation' column contains the exact same words as in the translation itself, and the 'Thesaurus' is an excerpt from the CDO (to be precise, it's retrieved from the 'Comprehensive_Coptic_Lexicon-v1.2-2020.xml' from its v1.2 release, as are the contents of 'Type'. The values in 'Coptic' are hyperlinks as usual, and 'Freq' is the frequency that a word occurs

Coptic-English index

The 'Translation' column contains the exact same words as in the translation itself, and the 'Thesaurus' is an excerpt from the CDO (to be precise, it's retrieved from the 'Comprehensive_Coptic_Lexicon-v1.2-2020.xml' from its v1.2 release, as are the contents of 'Type'. The values in 'Coptic' are hyperlinks as usual, and 'Freq' is the frequency that a word occurs
