

How to recover my Hotmail password without changing it?

Hotmail is one of the most widely used services by everyone. It is one of the popular email services and can be used as personal as well as professional. It is used for sending and receiving emails. You can access certain online services by creating an account on Hotmail. It has great features and services. It has so many security features including password recovery and two-step verification that keep your account safe and secure. It provides full customer support to its users in case they face any issues in the services.

Sometimes, there are some issues which come in Hotmail but we have the solutions. You can easily recover your account. To recover Hotmail password, you need to go through the steps below.

- First of all, you should visit the official website of Hotmail.
- You need to go to the sign-in page.
- Provide your username and password.
- If you don't remember the password, then click on the forgot password option.
- Now, you need to tap the option to recover the account.
- You need to select an alternate email address to recover the account.
- Check your email inbox. It will send you the code to recover the account.
- Now, you will see the option to create a new password. Click on it.
- Type the password twice to confirm it. The password should be strong enough and it should contain special symbols and characters.
- Now, you need to login to your account with the new password.

These are the steps to recover the Hotmail account. You can take the help of Hotmail password recovery. If you find any problem, you can contact customer support. They will provide the necessary assistance and clear all your issues.