What is your vision for a reopened /r/SandersForPresident, and what steps would you take to work towards it with the community?	I envision a meeting room for organization, a civic education platform, a help kiosk and recruitment center, a market square that shares and informally validates sources and narratives, an auditorium for political meetings and rallies, an authority that endorses fundraising and activism, a pulpit for public officials, and a spotlight for non-cynical skeptics to press them for transparency and visibility. Overall it is the people caring for each other and what causes are aiding the future we believe in. /r/SandersForPresident is the will of the people in more ways than one. To work towards that I'd stay active and connected in my local community, read a wide range of sound opinions, and actively cultivate my critical thinking and health. I'd take a mindful approach to stress management and take a formal look at moderation and marry it to my own self applied patterns on the topic. I'd also stay up to date on the narrative and relevant social trends. I'd work to maintain our shared space to whatever standard is arrived at. I'd suggest having meme days every two months or so perhaps in a pinned comment at the top of activism days. I suggest highlighting calls to action, art about pertinent ideas, moderator updates, official press releases, upcoming events, and the like, in a weekly best-of megathread. I'd like to see a robust sidebar: Including a schedule of Reddit AMA's (including from out of sub) and Bernie's public schedule and with updated links to media after events. And a map of Our Revolution and

	the rest of the movement would be good along with a maintained introduction link, daily specific calls to action, and a highlights report from the day before. It's something to work towards in my opinion. Pragmatic idealism.

Are there any special projects that you worked on or are working on?	I've made some calls, asked some questions, knocked on doors, researched and reported a bit, I'm writing a book on civics, I started a local Our Revolution book club, I'm running for local office, I went to a protest last night, I'm looking into going to standing rock, and I dressed as Bernie for Halloween: https://imgur.com/J0XOJ34
What motivates you? How? Why?	I'm enthralled with humanity, I push perspective until we're all on the same team, I try to see as much of the future I believe in in my present today. I'm an activist for the fulfillment that acting this way brings. I balance the mindsets of: 'If I don't do it, it won't get done' & 'if I don't do it, I don't get to act in those ways like I want to'. And while I'm a fan of motivation, I find determination desires to to be plan A.
What is something that inspires you? How? Why?	Bernie Sanders mindset and it's outworkings. I'll spare you my verbosity on how and share some artistic examples instead: www.reddit.com/r/soKu/comments/5dym4q/sanders_art_aggregate/ The why is: fish gotta swim, brains have to think; I like thinking good thoughts.
What was your favorite childhood story? Why?	Childhood road trip across the states in an rv. Because of my family inside of the rv and a great environment on the outside too (also the icecream).
What do you want to be when you grow up?	Helpful
