I remember being in school (perhaps year 3 - around 8 years old) and my male teacher sat next to me to mark my maths work, every time I got an answer wrong, I laughed (I think it was a way to offset and disperse any anger, because that's what I expected to receive) and then after a few incorrect answers, I remember my teacher losing his temper and shouting, at me for laughing. He shouted that it wasn't funny that I got some wrong and I remember feeling like I just couldn't win. Whatever my reaction, response or behaviour, I would almost always disappoint someone.
